Did you know?

Fireflies are often seen lighting up the night sky on warm evenings. They are particularly abundant during the summer months. One reason that fireflies glow is to attract mates. Males will flash, and females will respond to mates they find interesting. Fireflies also may glow to avoid predators.

The luciferase enzyme in firefly cells causes a chemical reaction that stimulates light, a phenomenon called bioluminescence. Fireflies are filled with lucibufagins, a poor-tasting chemical that turns off predators from attacking the blinking bug. Some fireflies cannot light up at all and use pheromones to attract mates. Fireflies can be fun to catch and release and also beneficial to have around. In the larval stage, fireflies will eat destructive insects. Adult fireflies may feed on nectar and could help to pollinate plants.

Despite their name, fireflies aren't really flies. They actually are a type of beetle. Fireflies are difficult to spot during the day because they're often resting on leaves or plants. It's only at night when their brilliant light show comes alive.

Dollars and sense

Study: Many parents don't have a will Almost half of all parents don't have a will. That's a stunning number of people who haven't put their final wishes in writing. A Princeton Survey Research Associates International's poll for Caring.com asked adult children across the country for their knowledge about their parents having a will.

Here are some of the statistics:

- Forty-four percent of parents don't have a will or living trust, period.

- Sixteen percent of adult children don't know whether their parents have a will.

- Of those who know there is a will, half of adult children don't know where to find those documents, and most don't know what's in them.

- Only 40 percent of parents have updated their wills within the past five years.

- One-quarter of adult children don't know if the wills have ever been updated.

- More females than males know what's in the wills, but men are more likely than women to know where the wills are.

- Older adults, who have older parents and therefore should be much more informed about the location and contents of wills, aren't much better off than young adults. In the 50-64 age category, 38 percent don't know what's in the will and 29 percent don't know where it is.

No matter your age, if you're a parent, you need a will. Consider what happens if you suddenly pass away without having made written instructions about what's to happen to your house, your financial accounts and all your other assets. Not only are you leaving your loved ones in a bad position at an emotional time, it's also going to be expensive for them to sort out.

Dying without a will is called intestate, and each state has different rules about how your property will be divided. Those rules won't necessarily coincide with your wishes.

If you consult an attorney about having a will written, ask about revocable living trusts laws in your state. It's possible (not guaranteed) that your inheritors can avoid the delays of probate.

If you have a will, update it periodically to add or revoke provisions by having a codicil (an amendment) added to it.

Have all your important documents in one place: insurance policies; information about how to contact your attorney, CPA and financial adviser; and your will. And be sure your family knows where this information is stored.

Miniature cars

G: I have 12 unopened boxes of Hudson Minia-tures Old Timer car kits from the 1950s. Can you advise me whom I should contact for an estimate value and possible sale of these items? — Al, Rio Rancho, NM

A: I checked the eBay listings and found several sets, including two that seemed typical: a 1903 Rambler and 1904 Oldsmobile. They were being offered for sale for $20 each. I would think the value for your sets would be in the $20 to $35 range. As with most collectibles, there are always exceptions to the rule. I suggest you contact antique and collectible dealers in your area to see if there is any interest. If not, eBay might be your best bet.

G: I have a Shirley Temple dish set that was given to me when I was a child. It includes a cereal bowl, pitcher and glass — all cobalt blue glass. I would like to sell the set but need to know the approximate value before I take the pieces to an antique shop. — Eileen, Albuquerque, NM to region. If I tell you, for example, that your set is worth $150 and you later discover that in your area it is valued at $300, you would not be happy. That is why I avoid placing values on antiques and collectibles. If that is what you need, I suggest you show your set to several dealers to see what amounts they offer.

The cobalt sets were made by the Hazel Atlas Glass Company and U.S. Glass Company from 1934 until 1942. The pitcher, mug and bowl were given away as premiums in boxes of Wheaties and Bisquick. Incidentally, all three pieces have been reproduced.

G: In one of your recent columns, you mentioned Fostoria. I have inherited several pieces, and I would like to add to my collection. Do you have any suggestions? — Susan, Sun City West, Arizona

A: The Fostoria Glass Society of American is one of the better groups for collectors and might be helpful for you. Contact is P.O. Box 826, Moundsville, WV 26041; www.fostoriaglass.org; and 304-845-9188.

Find the best method of treating warm weather insects

Homeowners know that the arrival of spring also marks the re-emergence of insects. While not every insect is harmful, if an infestation grows considerably or if insects begin to move from the outdoors into a home, it may be time for homeowners to call in a professional.

The Entomological Society of America points out that homeowners cannot count on bitterly cold winters to help control the numbers of insects in their yards. Insect ecology is affected by various factors and is not solely dependent on temperature. Furthermore, what occurred one year certainly may not be repeated the next, as homeowners who have had various insect infestations in their yards can attest. One year a yard may be overcome with ants, while the next year it may suffer through an earwig infestation.

The first step homeowners looking to curtail insects in their yards can take is to determine if the insects they see are genuine threats to their lawns. Some bugs emerge and swarm early in the season, but then gradually disappear as spring turns into summer. Other insects may come out of hiding if a homeowner is doing a lot of yard work or construction around a house. Practice a wait-and-see approach to determine if you really have an insect problem or just have stirred up activity.

Homeowners also must decide if it is bearable living with the insects. If insects are not doing any damage or if they can be controlled relatively easily, then you might be able to avoid calling in the professionals. However, if critters like termites and certain species of wood-eating insects are invasive and damaging your yard, you may need to take action.

Anyone concerned with the side effects of pesticides and insecticides can first try to remedy the problem naturally. Sometimes it's just a matter of making a yard less hospitable to insects. Remove leaves and clean up debris close to the house, as these can both encourage infestations. Piles of rotting wood or leftover firewood can be a food or shelter source for a number of insects. Inspect water spigots for leaks and improve suspect drainage on your property, as these things can be welcoming to bugs that like moist surroundings. Remove standing water whenever possible to eliminate spots for mosquitoes to incubate larvae.

Natural remedies also may do the trick. Mint, bay leaves, catnip, and garlic can repel insects like roaches and ants. Citrus can be a natural flea deterrent. Some homeowners have had success planting marigolds around their yards to serve as a natural bug repellent because the flowers produce a scent that many insects find repulsive. Thai lemon grass plants also can be used to keep mosquitoes at bay.

Remember, natural predators, such as birds, bats, spiders, and larger insects, feed on nuisance bugs. Keeping these helpful predators around may be an effective and natural way for homeowners to control annoying pests.

If an insect problem seems out of control or if you need a professional opinion about the damage being done to your home or landscape, consult with an exterminator. Licensed exterminators have the training and expertise to assess insect concerns and create a plan of action that will minimize the risk to inhabitants of your home and nearby wildlife. An exterminator will know what it takes to treat insects and maximize the chances of removing the problem promptly and effectively.

Warm weather is synonymous with many things, including the return of insects. Homeowners may be able to treat unruly bugs on their own, but especially problematic infestations may require the help of experienced exterminators.

Collecting

by Larry Cox

Fiesta Ware

G: I have a dinner set of Fiesta from the 1940s in various colors, including blue, yellow, green and orange. Do these pieces have any value? — David, Sun City, AZ

A: Fiesta dinnerware is produced by the Homer Laughlin China Company in 14 colors, in addition to several special promotions from 1936 until 1972. The original colors were Cobalt Blue, Green, Ivory, Red, Turquoise and Yellow. During the 1950s, Chartreuse, Forest Green, Gray, Medium Green and Rose were added.

Fiesta ware is quite collectible. To find out how much the pieces you have are worth, I suggest you invest in a good price guide. I especially like "Warman's Fiesta Ware: Identification & Price Guide" by Mark F. Moran (Krause Books). It is available at amazon.com or from the publisher, www.krause.com.

G: Recently, I purchased a partial set of flatware in the Colfax pattern. It was made by the Durgin Silver Company. Will it be difficult to complete this set? — Barbara, Knoxville, TN

A: Your pattern was introduced in 1922. The company was started by William B. Durgin in Concord, NH, in 1853. It eventually became one of the largest flatware and hollowware manufacturers in the United States. Gorham purchased the firm in 1905, and production relocated to Providence, RI, in 1931.

Will it be easy to complete your set? Nothing is impossible, but it could be expensive. The Silver Queen is a family-owned business that tracks down older sterling flatware patterns and might be able to help you. Contact is sales@silverqueen.com; and 800-262-3134.

G: I have a teapot made by the Clifton Art Pottery studio of New Jersey. What can you tell me about this company? — Laura, Palm Beach, FL

A: The Clifton Art Pottery company was started by Fred Tschirner and William A. Long in Newark, NJ. From 1905 until 1911, it made art pottery and then transitioned into tile. According to "Lehner's Encyclopedia of U.S. Marks on Pottery, Porcelain & Clay" by Lois Lehner, the company made two distinct types of pottery: Crystal Patina and Indian Ware. By 1914, the plant seemed to be devoted mainly to tile when the name was changed to the Clifton Porcelain Tile Company.

Female singer/songwriters to woo the crowd June 13 as MVC Summer Concert Series continues at Unity Hall

FORT PLAIN, NY — Five bands fronted mainly by female performers will strum listeners' heart-strings on Saturday, June 13, as the curtain goes up on the second of the Mohawk Valley Collective's Summer Concert Series at Historic Unity Hall beginning at 6 p.m.

Wooing the crowd with their silken voices, their alluring harmonies, and the percussive striking of acoustic chords, New York City-based alternative folk musician Christie Belanger (<http://christiebelanger.bandcamp.com>), NPR-featured vocalist Caitlin Cauty some mighty fine singing."

Musicians will take the stage at the site of the former Universalist Church at 19 Center St., Fort Plain, starting at 6 p.m. Advance tickets are $7.50 and can be purchased at www.brownpapertickets.com/event/1433747. They can also be purchased at the door for $10 each.

Other exceptional local, national, and international performers from a gamut of musical genres and styles will headline other weeks' programs with a mix of acoustic and amplified performances: On June 28, German-based Stromorchester will on Aug. 22.

Before those season-ending performances, however, the MVC will host local talent including Spike and the Boys, Rumpus, Cosby Gibson & Tom Staudle, Stone Soup, and Jocelyn Arndt during the non-profit organization's third annual River Through Time benefit in Fort Plain's Haslett Park on Saturday, Aug. 8. The Haslett Park performances are free. Also featured during the event are the popular and well-liked raffle drawing, which features kayak and bike giveaways, and Frankie's chicken barbecue.

Reminiscing about the village's Erie Canal past, when operatic and theatrical performances by notable performers were commonplace, MVC Officer Tolga Morawski said, "We can have great music right here in Fort Plain again."

The non-profit MVC has the mission of supporting arts and cultural events in Montgomery County. It is also dedicated to the restoration and adaptive reuse of Unity Hall and another of the area's historic architectural gems, the former West Hill School in Canajoharie.

Each year since its inception, the concert series has expanded and evolved. Funding for 2015 programs and the River Through Time event has been made possible, in part, through grants by the Erie Canalway National Heritage Corridor, the NYS Canal Corporation, and additional funding from the Montgomery County Occupancy Tax administered by the Montgomery County Legislature. Also partnering in support of the concert programming is the Erie Station of Fort Plain and WEXT-97.7 FM.

The support of corporate and individual sponsors is also appreciated;

Vocalist Caitlin May and guitarist Philip Arcuri, members of the upstate-New York American Honey Band, perform during the Mohawk Valley Collective's May 16 concert at Historic Unity Hall in Fort Plain. Five bands fronted by mainly female performers will hit the 19 Center St. stage on Saturday, June 13, for the second of the MVC's 2015 summer concerts. The performances begin at 6 p.m.

(<http://caitlincanty.com>), and Amsterdam resident Sarah Bogan (www.facebook.com/pages/Sarah-Bogan), performing with local resident Joe Gyurik, will leave listeners longing for more.

For those with a yen for indie rock, singer/songwriter Carrie Erving of Brooklyn-based Ponyhof (<http://ponyhofmusic.com>) will synthesize an electrifying performance with her electronic music; and Vermont-based Alpenglow (www.alpenglowmusic.com) will present a sound that their website describes as hard hitting, "combining psych-guitars, melodic bass lines, chugging drums, synthy strings, stringy syths, and energize the audience with their Electro-Iconic Bridge: 9th Symphony for Electrophonic Orchestra. This special, free concert bridges the city of Minden, Germany, and sister municipalities in the United States.

Indie rock musician Ross Cashiola of Hotel Brotherhood, who hails from Marfa, Texas, and Mike Doughty, formerly of the famous '90's group, "Soul Coughing," will entertain listeners with their solo performances on July 11; and Leah Shaw and Aviva Jaye, Monica Garri-do, eBone Underground, Eugene Tyler Band, and AJ Ghent Band will close out the summer with Southern Rock and Soul and a Kickstarter campaign (www.kickstarter.com/projects/415408752/second-annual-summer-music-series) has been launched. Anyone interested in supporting the River Through Time benefit event or the summer concert series is asked to contact the MVC at HYPERLINK "mailto:info@mohawkvalleycollective.com" info@mohawkvalleycollective.com or by calling 518-993-5506.

Advance tickets for all regular events at the Unity Hall concert venue are $7.50. Tickets can also be purchased for $10 each at the door. Please go to mohawkvalleycollective.com/music for more information, advance tickets, links to performers' websites, where you can sample their music, schedules, or for support of the Kickstarter campaign. All proceeds go toward future event programming and preservation efforts.

Unveiling of community mural leads Memorial Day 2015 events

by Elizabeth A. Tomlin

Most area teens were still sleeping on Memorial Day when OESJ High School art students ca Bruce, Teresa Krutz and Samantha LaCoppola joined their art instructor Sara Thibodeau and the members of St. Johnsville's Morris J. Edward's American Legion Post 168 to unveil the Community Mural the girls had designed and painted for the community.

all of the work on the mural was done by the four girls and that she had only provided advice and supervised the project.

Unveiling B6

An unveiling of a St. Johnsville community mural depicting the different branches of the U.S. Armed Forces, designed and painted by 4 OESJ High School teens and displayed on the side of the American Legion building, took place in the early morning of Memorial Day.

Hung high on the side of the American Legion building at the corner of Main and Center Streets, and directly across from Stewart's, the mural can be clearly observed by anyone traveling east on Route 5 through the village of St. Johnsville.

The mural depicts the Statue of Liberty and men and women in uniform from all branches of the military.

Folks began gathering for the unveiling ceremony at 6:45 a.m. The students, Thibodeau, Susi and veteran Charlie Weaver boarded a lift, which elevated them up to the 8'x20' mural where Susi presented them with a banner thanking them and recognizing their service.

Thibodeau noted that

Fort Plain's VFW Post 554 Princess Haley Sanders watches thoughtfully, as past Commander Brad Schrell prepares to throw a Memorial Wreath into the Mohawk River.

Town of Root Museum

Members of the Root Historical Society in Montgomery County worked together with the Advancing Tobacco Free Communities program of Hamilton, Fulton and Montgomery Counties to sign a tobacco free grounds policy on May 20, 2015. The policy, which applies to all areas of the Town of Root Museum on Carlisle Road in Sprakers, is part of the society's commitment to providing a safe and healthy place for those who will visit the museum. Exposure to secondhand smoke is known to cause death and disease and is the third leading cause of preventable death in this country, killing over 50,000 non-smokers each year. To learn more about how your organization can protect workers and patrons from secondhand smoke or to adopt a tobacco free grounds policy, contact Sitts at Catholic Charities of Fulton and Montgomery Counties at 518-762-8313.

"We are very proud of these students for sharing their talent to support our community and country," remarked Tony Susi, Commander of Post 168. "We can't thank them enough!"

Whatchamacallits

Walter Schlierman provides this week's Whatchamacallit. He stopped by Lee Publications recently with a device he wanted to know a little more about. It's a metal crank of some sort — with three arms; two are movable and one is in a fixed position.

Each arm has a curved hook on the end and when the hand crank is turned clockwise, the two movable arms retract. You may remember a few Whatchamacallits ago when we featured a carpet stretcher with a similar design and process. This device looks to be from the around same era as that carpet stretcher. If you recognize this antique contraption or would like to offer up your best guess, please send in your idea to the Lee Publication's Editorial Department via email, phone-call or U.S. Postal Service.

FLY IT HIGH ON FLAG DAY

Our Local Merchants Proudly Sponsor These Fun Facts About Our Country's Flag:

★ Flag Day recognizes the "birth" of the American flag, when on June 14, 1777 the Continental Congress officially established the flag of our new nation.

★ Many historians believe that the first American flag was designed by Congressman Francis Hopkinson and sewn by Philadelphia seamstress Betsy Ross.

★ The original American flag consisted of 13 stripes alternating red and white, and 13 white stars in a blue field which represented the "New Constellation" of 13 colonies.

★ Our flag's colors are also symbolic. Red signifies hardiness and valor; white stands for purity and innocence; and blue represents vigilance, perseverance and justice.

Car buying and selling simplified: Insider secrets to avoiding hassles and saving money

Having a car is a necessity for most people, but buying and selling one shouldn't cause headaches and waste time. Industry insiders know there are steps that can help both buyers and sellers maximize their investment while minimizing stress.

"The process of buying or selling a car can be complicated, but it doesn't have to be," says Mike Dodd, a 25-year veteran of the automotive industry and CEO of Carphoria. "The key is to be smart and thoroughly consider your options. Don't assume you have to sell and buy the same way your parents did."

Dodd offers these tips that savvy car owners can rely on when buying and selling a vehicle:

Know your budget

Buying a car is a large purchase, so make sure to stick to your budget. If you are financing your vehicle, be sure to get pre-approved for a loan at the lowest rate you qualify for. Often getting financed at the dealership doesn't allow you to get the lowest rate. Even a small increase in interest rates can add up to thousands of dollars over the life of your loan. If you do finance through a dealership, ask to speak to the lender directly to confirm you are getting the rate that you actually qualify for, and that you aren't giving a few percentage points to the dealer as part of their "facilitation fee."

Buy used rather than brand new

Financially savvy car buyers understand that buying a brand new car is expensive. In fact, new cars decline in value by about 25 percent each year for the first five years, according to Edmunds. That means if you change your mind next year, your $40,000 car will only be worth $30,000 (and chances are if you financed it, you owe more for it than it is actually worth). Instead, research the car you'd like to own and look for one a year old, with less than 15,000 miles on it. That will instantly save you money. Also, allow yourself some time to shop online and in person so you can find the price you want without feeling pressured to buy on the spot. Remember, there will always be another car you like — you don't have to make rushed decisions.

Buy and trade separately

Most people leave

money on the table by simply trading in their vehicle when they purchase their new one. You should negotiate your purchase without any sort of trade-in taken into consideration. The same goes for negotiating the sale of your old car. By separating the two, you are able to focus on the getting the best outcome in both transactions.

Thoroughly inspect used vehicles

Third-party history reports on automobiles are a great starting point when you are looking to purchase a used vehicle. But half of motor vehicle crashes go unreported, and more than 450,000 vehicles each year have false odometer readings, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Whether from a dealer, private owner or personal friend, always get a comprehensive inspection done on used vehicles before signing anything. Having an accurate picture of the current state of everything from the motor to the air conditioner could affect the price you should be paying.

Get an extended warranty

Car repairs are an inevitable part of car ownership. However, extended warranties provide peace of mind and can save you a lot of money on repairs once a manufacturer's warranty is up. Shop around to get the highest-quality plan for the lowest cost from a reputable company.

Buyers and sellers can take steps to maximize their car investment and minimize stress.

What's the real cost of that auto repair? How to know if you're paying the best price?

Do you take your car's "health" for granted? Only when the check engine light comes on do you realize how important a fully functional vehicle is to your daily life. Feelings of fear, regret and anxiety often rush in: "Will my car break down?" "Should I have gotten my oil changed sooner?" Can I trust that I'm receiving a fair price for repairs?"

These are all reasonable concerns, according to Joe Wiesenfelder, Cars.com executive editor.

"According to Mintel, on average, drivers spend nearly $1,000 per year maintaining their cars, and that number will likely only increase as the average age of vehicles continues to get older," says Wiesenfelder. "Even more important, a recent survey by Cars.com and Toluna found that one in three drivers don't trust that the prices mechanics quote to them are fair. 'Expensive' and 'stressful' are the top words that come to mind for many consumers when they're thinking about car maintenance and repairs."

Knowledge is power, but for many consumers, car maintenance can be shrouded in mystery. Many don't know which mechanic to go to, how much to pay or if the price they're being quoted is accurate. Thankfully, tools and resources are available to help drivers confidently navigate the automotive service and repair process. Here are a few expert tips, resources and busted myths to arm you with the information you need to make informed, confident decisions about car service:

1. You probably don't need to change your oil every 3,000 miles. Due to technology advancements, many auto manufacturers recommend changing oil at intervals of 7,500 miles or more for new cars.

2. Does a dirty air filter really hurt performance? A clogged air filter won't significantly affect fuel economy, but it can reduce acceleration from 6 to 11 percent, according to a U.S. Department of Energy Study. For that reason, it's a good idea to periodically visually check the engine air filter.

3. Cars.com has launched a new "Service & Repair" feature that provides a fair price estimate for different types of service, helping ensure drivers never overpay. The online tool also helps drivers find local service providers and offers reviews from actual customers to help them find a quality mechanic.

4. Drivers expect the tires that come with their new vehicle to last a long time, but tire life depends on many factors, including: the quality of the tire, its treadwear rating, whether it is an all-season, summer performance or winter tire, the type of vehicle and where and how it is driven.

5. Service engine? If the check engine light comes on and has a steady illumination, that indicates a possibly serious issue, and it should be dealt with quickly by a mechanic. If the check engine light is flashing, find a place to park the vehicle and turn the engine off as quickly as you safely can. Ignoring your check engine light increases the likelihood of additional problems.
